

ABSTRACT

A system for accumulating and evaluating electromagnetic phenomena of at least one power quality category of a power distribution system, using a circuit monitor or 5 processing system that summarizes and trends electromagnetic phenomena. The system provides for expressing the power quality index as a single number for each power quality category present and for combining multiple power quality indices into a single overall power quality index.